LONG BEACH

METH TASK FORCE

The Long Beach Meth Task Force (LBMTF) is a body of active community members, current and former methamphetamine users, service providers, government and city agency representatives, who gather to meet the challenges posed by methamphetamine in Long Beach communities and address what the Task Force can advocate and do to improve quality of life, prevention services, and access to treatment, for those affected by methamphetamine.

A public, community group, the Meth Task Force is actively seeking individuals and organizations to join the discussion. If you are interested and would like further information, please contact Jon Mechling, Chairperson, Long Beach Meth Task Force, at the Center for Behavioral Research and Services at 562.495.2330 ext. 135.

THE LBMTF STARTED WITH

A Call to Action from the Meth Community Forum, in which over 200 people gathered in March 2006.
