MESSAGE FROM OUR DIRECTOR

Greetings from the Graduate Center for Public Policy and Administration! It has been another busy year here in the Center. The MPA Program is undergoing its self study year for NASPAA with reaccreditation scheduled for June, 2009. Don't be surprised if you receive a request to participate in our self study project.

As I am sure everyone is aware, the State of California is undergoing some severe budget cutbacks. These cutbacks will directly affect the CSU and Cal State Long Beach. The Center has worked very diligently to plan for these cuts as we saw them coming several months ago. As a result, we have been able to maintain most of our course offerings for Fall, 2008. However, our Summer, 2008 budget was cut by 50%. This will mean large classes and long waiting lists for our Summer courses. While this is not an ideal situation, it is the one that we must face in the immediate future. Please be assured that the Center will continue to proactively address any future budget cuts and preserve course offerings in the future.

Now on to more pleasant topics! The Center has been implementing a variety of curricular changes to better meet the needs of public administration students in the 21st century. Dr. Dede is heading up our new assessment efforts as we continue to be a model for student learning assessment across the university.

The Center's faculty remains very active professionally and academically. Dr. Frank Baber recently received a Fulbright grant in the Distinguished Chair Category to lecture in Environmental Policies at the Politecnico di Torino in Italy during Spring, 2009. This is a tremendous honor for Dr. Baber so remember to congratulate him if you see him roaming the halls (or relaxing in his recliner). Be sure to check out the work of our faculty in the faculty updates section of the newsletter. The Center continues to have some of the most productive and recognized faculty in the university!

In closing, I strongly encourage you to remain involved with the Center and its programs. We are very proud of the program and the success of its graduates and we look forward to a productive Summer and Fall semester.

Sincerely,

David C. Powell

DISTANCE LEARNING

This accelerated, web-based learning environment degree program makes use of two forms of course content delivery. One night per week, during each six-week course session, students will participate in a synchronous web-cast lecture/discussion with the course instructor. This real-time, interactive session will be conducted using Elluminate software. Students will also participate in one asynchronous class session using BlackBoard software. Students may access the asynchronous session any time during the designated timeframe. Participation in Blackboard sessions is non-interactive. Students are required to have a computer with web access (broadband access preferred) and a current web browser. Students are not required to purchase software to participate in the program. Electronic mail and facsimile machines are also utilized before during, and after class sessions to facilitate effective communication.

During the Elluminate class session, students communicate with each other and the professor, real-time, even though they may be at different locations. Students will participate via their own computers for all web-based class sessions. Most Saturday sessions will be held at the CSULB campus. Some changes in courses may be deemed necessary and made by the Graduate Center for Public Policy and Administration (GCPPA) to meet the needs, of the cohort. Due to various circumstances, some beyond our control, CSULB must sometimes change, cancel, postpone, combine classes, or change, instructors or locations as the situation warrants. Each course listed is three units.

ALUMNI JACQUELINE SEABROOKS POLICE CHIEF GAINING TRUST IN INGLEWOOD

Jacqueline Seabrooks, a 26-year police veteran of Santa Monica, took over September 28, 2007 as Police Chief in the Inglewood Police Department.

Ms. Seabrooks, 45, leads Inglewood's 200-strong police force, is the first black woman in California to hold a city police chief's position and only the second female to hold the top office among Los Angeles County's 48 police departments.

Inglewood Councilman Daniel Tabor said: "What we get from Jacqueline is a person on their way up, trying to make their mark as a chief."

Det. Waters, vice president of the Inglewood Police Association, agreed, and stated: "She seems like a person that can change things. . . Like a doer and not a talker."

Seabrooks feels right at home in Inglewood. She was born and raised in neighboring South Los Angeles, which shares a the same cultural mix and many problems.

Ms. Seabrooks has her hands full, but pledges to redefine the Department's goals to recover the organizational confidence lost amid the scandals at the Inglewood Police Department .

FACULTY UPDATES

W. Frank Baber

Frank Baber has been named Fulbright Distinguished Chair of Environment Policy at the Polytechnic Institute of Turin, Italy for 2009. He will teach a graduate class in International Environment Law, and plans to visit other universities to promote academic exchange programs for CSULB faculty and staff.

Edward J. Martin

Edward Martin I'm currently editor of a symposium on "Social Class and Inequality" for Public Administration Quarterly. Should be out in January 2009.

Martha J. Dede

Dr. Martha Dede spent a very cool, but tiring, week in Washington, D.C. last Summer to conduct some preliminary archival research for a book she is writing on the role of American Public Administration in development and execution of the Marshall Plan.

She's doing this because she researched her little heart out and discovered that only one account of PA's role in the Marshall Plan has ever been published, and that was about 50 years ago, while the Plan was still in operation. Hence, she decided to take advantage of the passage of time, and the perspective that time can bring, and to work on an administrative history of the Marshall Plan. More precisely, she said, "Hey! There's a great big 'ol hole in our field's history. Get in your truck and drive on through the!"

She'll return to Washington for another very cool, but tiring week, in June to continue the research. And, as a point of information, don't let anybody tell you researching and writing a book is a boatload of fun.

Dr. Dede was elected to the University's Program Assessment and Review Council in 2006, and later that same year was elected as Vice-Chair of the Council. The Council has an interesting mandate, and has a number of very interesting people on it and she learned a lot, having either Chaired or been involved in four program reviews in the last two years. Satisfying as it was, however, she'll be glad to rotate off this year: unlike some service on University committees, this one requires a lot of hard work.

Dr. Dede has also been working on losing weight. Now, mind you, she was really tiny until she got to be about 40, when suddenly things started blowing up on her. It's a never-ending battle, made worse by the fact that her husband, who is six feet, weighs about 12 pounds and eats donuts and sugar-fortified coffee every single day of his life, and never gains a freakin' pound. Life isn't fair.

William S. Moore

William Moore was promoted to the rank of associate professor and granted tenure effective this past academic year. Dr. Moore continues to serve as the Public Finance Certificate/Specialization Advisor. In addition he developed a new microeconomics course for public administrators that will be offered on a regular basis in the future. Dr. Moore this past April 2008 presented a paper at the Western Social Science Association Conference on income inequality and industrial composition. The paper has been accepted for publication in an upcoming issue of Public Administration Quarterly and shows how the restructuring of the US economy has lead to greater income inequality.. Finally Dr Moore has continued to serve on a number of boards and committees this past year including Cal-ICMA and the Associated Students, Inc. Board of Control.

John W. Ostrowski

John Ostrowski is teaching two courses for Summer School 2008 and will be developing a new special topics course, (PPA 590) in Spring 2009. Dr. Ostrowski is currently busy agility training his two new Shelties, Merlin and Arthur, and occasionally still goes on long bike rides around Southern California.

FACULTY UPDATES

David C. Powell, Director

David Powell became Center Director in Fall, 2006 and can usually be found under piles of papers in his office. In addition to his duties as Director, he is also the Assessment Coordinator for the College and Health and Human Services and Director of the MPA-Distance Learning Program. He recently published an article, "Student satisfaction with a distance learning MPA program: A preliminary comparison of on-campus and distance learning students' satisfaction with MPA courses" in the Journal of Online Learning and Teaching. He will present a paper entitled, "How Do We Know What They Know?" at the Teaching Public Administration Conference in Richmond, Virginia this May.

NEW KID ON THE BLOCK: LECTURER LINDA-MARIE SUNDSTROM

After receiving my Masters at California State University, San Bernardino. In 2003 I enrolled in the doctoral program at the University of La Verne, in Public Administration, and will receive my degree in April, 2008.

I later opened Avanti Consultants, in order to identify funding needs, developing staffing and budget resources, creating measurable outcomes, administering projects and funding, researching appropriate funding sources, and writing and judging federal, state, local, and foundation grants for the County of Riverside, The Wellness Community, Salton Sea Coalition, Ask Earthman Foundation, Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce Community Foundation, United Anglers of Southern California, Adult Day Services, AIDS Service Foundation, College of the Desert, Sacramento City College, Los Angeles Valley College, Cypress College, El Camino Community College, College of the Sequoias, Chaffey College, and Miramar College. In the past year I have won grants from federal, state, local and foundation funders.

On special request from the event promoters, I served as Director of Finance for the 25th Celebration of Earth Day in Washington D.C. Which was attended by more than 200,000 people.

Michelle A. Saint-Germain

Michelle Saint-Germain is serving full-time as the University-wide Director of Program Review and assessment, in the second year of a three-year contract. Her new book, "Women Legislators in Central America: Politics, Democratization, and Policy" was recently published by the University of Texas Press. She has been active in the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration (NASPAA), serving on the Standard Committee, to re-write the accreditation standards for the first time in over 20 years. Dr. Saint-Germain is also participating in conferences and campus visits for the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC). She is also designing a state-wide web page for assessment of student learning in the Cal State University system. Finally, Dr. Saint-Germain is involved in the new Ed.D. in Educational Leadership being offered in the College of Education at CSULB.

FACULTY ACHIEVEMENTS PROFESSOR FRANK BABER

Frank Baber, Associate Professor in the Graduate Center for Public Policy and Administration, has been named Fulbright Distinguished Chair of Environmental Policy at the Polytechnic Institute of Turin for 2009.

The Turin Chair is one of only 38 Distinguished Chairs among more than 800 Fulbright awards granted to U.S. Faculty each year. According to the Fulbright Commission, the Distinguished Chairs are the most prestigious appointments in the Fulbright Scholar Program.

During his Fulbright semester in Turin, Professor Baber will teach a graduate class in international environmental law and occasionally give public lectures on the topic. More specifically, the class will focus on issues such as global warming, hazardous waste and international threats to natural resources. He also plans to visit other universities to promote academic exchange programs for CSULB faculty and students.

PI ALPHA ALPHA NEW INDUCTEES 2008

The Pi Alpha Alpha, the National Honor Society for Public Policy and Administration, inducted Twenty-nine new members in 2008. To qualify for membership, applicants must have completed at least 18 units in Public Policy and Administration with an average GPA of at least 3.7.

The faculty and staff of the center for Public Policy wish to congratulate these newest members.

John McQueen (2005), has landed a position with the Auto Club as the new Associate Marketing Manager, Motorsports & Sports Marketing. He will be overseeing the marketing efforts primarily related to Auto Club's extensive motorsports involvement, and will oversee most other marketing efforts related to sports in general.

Cerah O'Grady (2007), is an Americorps member serving with Habitat for Humanity of Greater Los Angeles, as a construction crew leader. She is contributing a year of service to help eliminate poverty housing.

Shannon O'Brien (2006), works for Community Action Partnerships of San Bernardino County as Program Manager (FSET Program), helping people, changing lives.

Marcia Pierce (2000), now a Major in the US Army, has been in Pristina, Kosovo, since October, 2007, working under NATO's auspices, in a newly-developed entity called the "Military-Civilian Advisory Division". She works with over 30 different nations' military and civilian personnel to assist in Kosovo's development as a free and independent country. She calls the job a "dream come true".

John C. Rios (2001), has become a Faculty at Axia College of Western International University, now affiliated with University of Phoenix. He currently teaches Financial Accounting and Cost Accounting for the University.

Mark Stainbrook (2006), LAPD Lieutenant and USAR Lieutenant Colonel, was the Center's first student Fulbright scholar and spent six months in the UK working with the West Yorkshire Police Force, on an area of interest to Lieutenant Stainbrook, one developed originally while a student in our program: police-Muslim community relations. He also was given visiting fellow status at Leeds University in the Theology and Religious Studies Department. While in the UK, he made a presentation on his research to a group of academic, police and community leaders, to say nothing of the BBC, which did a short documentary on his work. He also met the Queen while there. Cool!

Francis Villalpando (2007), is happy to report that her final project for the MPA (a nice work on "branding") resulted in a promotion in Loyola Marymount University's Community Relations Department. Besides that, some of the hard work she put in on that document will be put to use soon, since she was asked to develop a University-wide Community Relations Communications Plan.

Tassarín Sothornboon (2004), has started a (Ph.D) program in Public Administration at Florida State University, in Tallahassee.
