Lightning Round - Putting Your Identity on

Throughout the 2021-2022 academic year, the Career Development Center developed new partnerships with the College of Liberal Arts to promote career development and student success. One of the most notable highlights was an invitation for the CDC to participate at the Student Conference for NLGJA (National Lesbian and Gay Journalists Association): The Association of LGBTQ (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer or Questioning) Journalists. Mathew Gonzales, Career Counselor, conducted a 20-minute lightning round session on the topic of "Putting Your Identity on Paper." Students who attended the session learned how to write a personal statement or essay where they can express their full self, highlighting their strengths, to compel reviewers while still respecting their personal boundaries. Through a follow-up email, the session coordinator expressed: "Thank you for a brilliant session today! It was super informative and the feedback from the students was marvelous."
